During the reading of the resolutions by the Clerk, a death-like stillness pervaded the densely packed room, and at the conclusion the applause from the Democratic side, the galleries and lobbies was really terrific. As soon as order could be restored Mr. Glenn arose from his seat and approaching the main aisle, said: "Mr. Speaker"; when the deafening applause was again resumed and continued for several what would naturally follow, spread with lightning rapidity throughout the city, and the rush to the galleries, lobbies and even on the floor of the House, was of such a char-Doorkeepers were called upon to preserve order. After much difficulty order was restored, and Mr. Glenn proceeded as follows:

MR. SPEAKER; - I am twenty-seven years of age. I was born and raised in the county of Yadkin, the county which I have the honor to represent on the floor of this House.

I supported the reconstruction acts of Congress and the several amendments to the Constitution, because I thought they were right. I believed that as the colored man was to live among us, christianity, humanity and the policy demanded that he should have all the legal and political rights which we enjoyed. It will make him a better member of the community; will serve to quicken his better impulses; will cause him to seek an education, and enable him to study the same book from which God intended that all races, and all colors, and all nationalities should learn great truths and vation of the Anglo Saxon race of our great Candler, of Buncombe, who is as yet undecided. ly meant no disrespect to the House. C. H. BROGDEN, Governor,

Special Tax Bonds Not Good.

Judge Henry, while holding a recent term of Wake Superior Court, decided that the six stitutional and void.

The case just decided by Judge Henry is thus stated by the Raleigh papers:

"John C. Blake vs. Wm. F. Asknew-an action brought to recover damages because the defendant refused to receive a Special Tax bendwhich the plaintiff had tendered him under a contract to deliver a good State bond. The defendant claimed that the Special Tax bonds were not valid and binding on the State.

The Judge made two points: first, whether the Western Division of the North Carolina railroad was an unfinished road in which the tion of the present Constitution; and second. whether a State stands on the same footing with individuals in regard to the acts of her agents, and is she stopped from denving the validity of her acts. Judge Henry says the road was unfinished only in the sense that it had never been begun. He declares that "it was separate and distinct from the 'Western North Carolina Railroad,' managing its affairs in its own way, and deriving its power from the same authority equal to it in dignity and more powerful in resources; and in it the State could not have had any direct pecuniary interest." Therefore he concludes that the Legislature had no grant of power to pledge to si road the credit and faith of the State in aid.

On the second head the Judge is equally emphatic in negation. He says that a State cannot repudiate its debts contracted by agents acting in accordance with the instructions given, but if the agent does an unauthorized act the State is not responsible. His words are: There is the amerence between individuals and the government: the former are liable to the extent of the power they have apparently given their agents, while the government is liable only to the extent of the power it has actually given to its officers."

In this decision Judge Henry clothes in the language of the law the common sentiment of North Carolinians. They have decided for themselves that the Special Tax bonds were conceived in iniquity and brought forth in sin. A high court pronounces in certain language that the people's previous decision was in accordance with the right and law of the care.

In antives on Thursday last. The new road is designed to connect the regions of the Cape Fear, beginning at Egypt, running through Chatham, same village, numbering 800, of which 700 are Alamance, Caswell, Rockingham and terminating at Danville. Running parallel with Haw River through the long distance of its fine water power, it opens up a magnificent prospect for the development of a section hitherto secluded from the more active world, and supplies a need which has only prevented the region from being regarded as one of the most valuable in the State. As to the ultimate constory of an act to charter the North Carolina struction of the road, we think there can be no doubt. The Baltimore & Ohio Railroad have a deep interest in the extension of their reads, new finished to Danville, and will gladly seize the opening thus made.

Baptist Statistics.—The past year has been one of great denominational growth with the Baptists of the United States. In the past year they have gained 51 associations, 990 charches, 756 ordained ministers, 127,632 members, making the present grand totals 912 associations, 21,510 churches, 13,154 ordained ministers and 1,764,171 church members, of whom 802,466 were baptized during the past year. They have about 8,000 more churches than they year have increased faster than the number of

MARDI GRAS FESTIVITIES AT MEMPHIS. Feb. 9.—The carnival to-day has been an immense success. The streets were thronged with people all day. The weather was rather too cool for comfort. The afternoon was signalized by a procession of ulks or mischief-ma harzed by a procession of this or misciner-ma-kers, and the evening by a grand pageant of the Memphi, the features of which were exhibited in a series of nineteen tableaux representing: St. George and the Dragon; the Romance of Chivalry; the Vision of Columbus; the present Power and Greatness of America; Columbus at the Spanish Court, expounding his theory of the globe; Scene in the Albambra the night before the Surrender of Granada; the Fall of Granada; How a World was Won at Chess in 1492; Embarkation of Columbus Symbolical Representation of Columbus's First Voyage, Mysteries of the Deep, Scene on board the ship Santa Maria on the Discovery of America, Columbus in Chains in Fortsess San Domingo, Death of Columbus, De Sote in Search of the Mississippi, De Soto Discovering the Mississippi. Seeking the Fountain of Youth. Burial of De Soto, and Apotheosis of Columbas. The effeet of these tableaux as they moved through he streets was magnificent. The costumes were gotten up in the finest style, and were true to the time and characters represented, while brillant calcium lights showed them to the best advantage. The affair closed with a series of brilliant tableaux at the New Memphis Theater, winding up with a grand ball, everything passing off without a single accident or incident to mar the festivities of the occasion. - Tribune

We take pleasure in laying before our readers the Annual Statement of the "North Carolina Home Insurance Co.," a first class Home Institution, which has been growing steadily in public favor, and offers undoubted security against loss of property by fire.

We have shown our faith by insuring with this Company, and advise our friends to do

Our town has been so wonderfully exempt from fires, that we are all too apt to think there is not much danger of our being visited by this terrible destroyer, but reason should teach us that we are never safe, and that the most prudent thing we can do, is to exercise the utmost care ourselves, and at the same time, let some good, reliable institution earry the risk of any accident that may overtake us.

Call on J. A. Lineback, Agent, at H. A. Siddall's Store, and let him give you a policy in this company, and see how much more comfortably you will rest these windy nights.

We have the largest stock of General Merchandise in either town, TO THE FARMERS OF THIS AND ADJOINING COUNTIES. We wish to inform you that by the last of February we will have in our Warehouses a large stock of Peruvian Juano and Standard Fertilizers. Our extensive acquaintance with manufacturers and minipulators and familiarity with nearly all brands of fertilizers, together with several years practical experience in the sale and use of them, and by strict attention and close observation, we are enabled to select such brands as will be remunerative to the farmer. There are but few who know a fertilizer by its analysis. You have to judge of its real value by the character of the manufacturer and agents who make and sell it, and more particularly by the results of it when applied on a crop. We offer this year the same brands as heretofore and guarantee the standard to be as high or higher than ever. These are old and reliable brands that have stood the test for years and increased in popularity each senson and it is with pleas-quantities for each at lowest prices and secure lowest rates of freight and sell for a very small per cent., not half what we can get by selling some brands offered in market. Our stock will be-No. 1 PERUVIAN GUANO, direct from Peruvian Agents.

Poetry.

THE TWO TRAVELLERS.

BY WILLIAM CULLEN BRYANT.

'Twas evening and before my eyes, There lay a landscape gray and dim, Fields faintly seen and twilight skies, And clouds that hid the horizon's brim.

I saw-or was it that I dreamed? A waking dream-I cannot say; For every shape as real seemed As those that meet my eye to-day.

Through leafless shrubs the cold wind hissed; The air was thick with falling snow; And onward through the frozen mist, I saw a weary traveller go.

Driven o'er that landscape bare and bleak, Before the whirling gusts of air, The snow-flakes smote his withered cheek And gathered on his silver hair.

Yet on he fared through blinding snows, And murmuring to himself, he said: "The night is near, the darkness grows, And higher rise the drifts I tread.

" Deep, deep each autumn flower they hide; Each tuft of green they whelm from sight; And they who journeyed by my side Are lost in the surrounding wight.

"I loved them; oh, no words can tell The love that to my friends I bore; We parted with the sad farewell Of those who part to meet no more.

"And I who face this bitter wind, And o'er these snowy hillocks creep, Must end my journey soon and find A frosted couch, a frozen sleep."

As thus he spoke a thrill of pain Shot to my heart; I closed my eyes, And when I opened them again I started with a glad surprise.

'Twas evening still, and in the west A flush of glowing crimson lay, I saw the morrow there and blest That promise of a glorious day.

The waters in their glassy sleep, Shone with the hues that tinged the sky, And rugged cliff and barren steep Gleamed with a brightness from on high.

And one was there whose journey lay Into the slowly gathering night; With steady step he held his way O'er shadowy vale and gleaming height.

I marked his firm though weary tread, The lifted eye and brow serene, And saw no shade of doubt or dread Pass o'er that traveller's placid mien.

And others came, their journey o'er, And bade good-night with words of cheer; "To-morrow we shall meet once more; 'Tis but the night that parts us here."

"And I," he said, "shall sleep ere long-These fading gleams will soon be gone-Shall sleep, to rise refreshed and strong In the bright day that yet shall dawn.

I heard; I watched him as he went, A lessening form, until the light Of evening from the firmament Had passed, and he was lost to sight.

Agricultural.

The Walking Cultivator.

There are many farmers in North Carolina, especially in the Eastern part of the State, who would find it profitable to use the Walking Cultivator in ploughing corn and perhaps cotton. It is my belief that this improvement is of greater value to the farmers of the west than any machine invented for the farm. I can give sound substantial reasons for this opinion but will not stop to do so here. The prairie farmers of Missouri use all the most improved machinery. Reapers, Mowers, Corn Planters, (drawn by two horses,) Horse Hay-Rakes, &c. But I think the walking cultivator yields the greatest actual profit of any one of them.

1. They are drawn by two horses, which walk on each side of the row of corn, as in the sulky cultivator.

2. The wheels are about three feet high and the axle bent upward so that it will pass over the corn till it is four feet high. 3. The ploughman walks behind and guides the shoyels, which are four in number, two on each side the corn. 4. One hand ploughs as many acres in a day as he goes over when laying off for planting in the spring-from 8 to 12 acres. 5. For every two horses on the farm the wages and board of one hand is amounting to prob-

6. The cost of the machine is only about half that of the sulky cultivator, say $30 to $35 cheaper. 7. They can be used in any ordinary farm land except very steep hill sides, if the land be clear of roots and stumps. 8 Any farmer who has 25 acres free of roots season to pay for the cultivator. 9. They are much lighter draft than the sulky cultivator, and will last many years.

10. The sulky cultivator would have been more extensively used in North Carolina if it were not that men are afraid of being laughed at for riding on them. No fogy can object to the walking cultivator on this account.

11. Try it. Liberty, Mo.

A. J. EMERSON.

Space in Planting Corn.

There is more or less disagreement as to the distance corn should be planted apart, and the number of stalks in a hill. Good crops are realized from three and a half feet planting, one or two stalks to the hill, according to the strength of the soil. Better has been grown, with the rows four feet apart, two stalks to a hill, the wide space between hills giving a chance for the fresh air to circulate. A growth of corn was not long since attempted, where the space between the hills was but half that of the last mentioned. The soil was black, highly manured, and supposed to be specially favorable to corn. There resulted an immense growth of stalks-three or four grains of corn having been dropped in each hill-but no corn, although it was the intention of the owner, confidently expressed to astonish his near neighare apt to plant our corn too thick, especially on thin soils. In well-fertilized and thoroughly-prepared soils, failures from planting too thick would be less frequent than they are.
